

Prevention from gaz poisoning

We should mention that for students of the Faculty "Mechanization of Irrigation and Drainage", there was organized an event about prevention from gas poisoning. The event was opened by the dean of the faculty B. Norov, that suggested about the necessity of prevention from gas poisoning, especially for students living in Dormitories, rented houses and houses of close relatives. Also, the head of "life safety" department A. Khodzhiev informed that according to statistics, most of the emergency situations in the country, which are happening over the past three years, especially in autumn-winter heating season are associated with industrial gas poisoning. For avoiding such situations all people must strictly follow the instructions.

During the event, handouts about the prevention from accidents were distributed to the participants. It should be noted that the deputy deans and trainers of the group regularly monitor the health of students, studying at the institute and introduce them to the conditions of rented housing.
