

Honored teachers

As long as man exists, memory is sacred. No one, nothing is forgotten. To preserve and appreciate today's peaceful time, people will not forget the war, its heroes, no one who made a worthy contribution to the victory and at the same time became an example and mentor for everyone in peacetime by their work, especially pedagogical activity. The presidential decree on measures for the preparation and celebration of Remembrance and Commemoration Day on 9 May specifically states: "memory is a sacred book, symbolizing the past, the fertilization of the ancestors, the national heritage, illuminating our lives. Dignity elevates man, gives nobility to his activities, dreams and goals.

It would be no exaggeration to say that on the day of remembrance and honoring it has become a good tradition not only to remember the participants of the Great Patriotic War, but also to learn about them from teachers, educators, veterans. Head of the department "vocational education and physical education" Z. Ismailova led the department visited the home of teacher Rinat Sultanovich, who was famous for his work for years, and now is in his old age. During the visit were noted periods of work with the mentor and expressed the value of the day, the conditions created, the care provided, as well as the fact that they are satisfied with life. Once again, it was a pleasure to remember that the guidance, the fertilization provided by the mentor, was always in the process of working as a programmer. We wish our mentor Musaev Rinat Sultanovich long life and good health.

Information was provided by the staff of the Department of Vocational Education and Physical Training
The Press-service of TIAME