

Our future depends on the young generation

In February this year, the Head of the Department of Land Management of the Faculty of Land Management A. Bobojonov and teachers from the department visited School No. 248 in the Yunusabad district of Tashkent. Our teachers held an open dialogue (round table) with students on "Protecting Youth from Information Attacks Today". Today, the object of an information conflict is any system whose properties may change as a result of the impact of information. The further development of our country, its political and socio-economic stability depends on young people in every respect. This requires protecting young people from various forms of information attacks and ideological influences in the process of globalisation. Today, dear readers, the formation of immunity to the influence of information attacks and the practical nature of the work carried out to orient them towards the interests of the state are directly linked to the worldview formed in relation to reality.
