

Interactive seminar on "The Key to successful research."

As we all know, the 21st century requires everyone to have a high level of knowledge, a keen mind, and a high level of expertise. In particular, that young people gain these qualities, along with their education, ensures that they will continue to grow in their area. Taking part in training, additional lessons and seminars can further enhance the knowledge gained at the university. On January 16, 2020, in the room of the doctoral (PhD) project school at the International Department of the Institute for Strategic Studies, SUSADICA Project Coordinator Nozila Mukhamedova conducted a new interactive seminar for students of the Institute on the key to successful research.

About 30 students of the Institute took part in this seminar. The seminar held in the form of interesting questions and answers. At the seminar, the participants exchanged views and ideas on how to write an article, what to look for in a research paper, the relevance of the topic chosen, the benefits it has for our society today. The students made suggestions on how to organize such seminars on a variety of topics. Taking into account this offer, it agreed that it would held the seminars every Thursday at 11:00 on the third floor of the Institute for students.
