

An advise to the youth of the Makhalla

As the great poet and thinker Abdurahman Jami confessed, "there is no better friend than a book in the world, in a sad time when you do not care. "Proverbs of such content also entered the treasury of the people. In particular, "a mind without books is a bird without wings," "knowledge is the light of reason," and "beauty is in enlightenment." For thousands of years, pointing people in the right direction, an important factor in their education, education, profession and, of course, happiness is a friendship with a book, not a desire to read a book. Especially in the lives of young people, a book plays a special role. Because a good book fosters love for the Motherland, respect for national and universal values, encourages goodness and kindness.
