

Dedicated to the World Day of Purity

The struggle for the purity of nature has a long history and rich traditions. This initiative is important as an expression of support, generosity, and charity. Our people have a long-standing tradition to work in an organized and united manner on the eve of various holidays and celebrations, to be engaged in landscaping and landscaping of neighborhoods, streets, and residential areas.

Employees of the Tashkent Institute of Irrigation and Agricultural Mechanization Engineers, managers, faculty, and students were ready by nine in the morning. Along with the improvement of the internal and external environment of the territory of the institute, classrooms, administrative premises, departments, a dining room, an information resource center were removed and put in order. They also removed dry weeds in the green area around the institute and in the yard, whitewashed trees and cut down dead branches, refurbished and painted the existing fire safety corners in the yard.

On the initiative of the Department of Ecology and Environmental Protection of the Tashkent region, employees of our institute, volunteers, and students took part in the action dedicated to the "World Day of Cleanliness", which took place in the Bostanlyk region. Mutual assistance is inherent in the very nature of our people.

Cleaning of classrooms, student dormitories, canteen, physical culture and sports complex, landscaping of courtyards was carried out.

Всемирный день чистоты также ценится как праздник солидарности, процветания и творчества. Он закладывает основу для коллективной гармонии, солидарности и укрепляет дружбу.
