

International Mother Language Day

It is known that February 21 is the International Mother Language Day. On this occasion, at the 2nd dormitory of the institute, a spiritual event was held. This date has been widely celebrated internationally since 2001.

The essence and content of the International Mother Language Day is reflected in the love of each nation, which is the core of its national mentality, spirituality, and culture. This day is celebrated as a holiday of the native language, in connection with this holiday, each person's love for his homeland and his language, his respect for him, and the sense of appreciation are renewed.

Associate Professor of the Department of "Humanitarian Subjects" Khakim Azimov and senior lecturer Bakhodir Kandov took part in this round table. Students of MHW and HTC actively participated in the quiz.
