

"What is - startup?"

Startups play an important role in the modern world. They change the world and give it a new look. A startup or start-up company (from the English. Start-up is a type of business aimed at generating income by implementing a fundamentally new idea. Unlike a regular business that a person is just starting up, a startup has an innovative basis, i.e. opens a business that previously did not exist at all. A startup in simple words is a business that has never existed before. The idea of any startup is novel, a new product, new technology, something that was not in the world before.

It is necessary to have a deep understanding and a correct understanding of this. Today, the department for work with youth, spirituality and education of the Kamoliddin Behzod National Institute of Arts and Design, in collaboration with the primary organization of the Institute's Youth Union, organized a special training seminar with the participation of a doctoral student at the Tashkent Institute of Irrigation and Agricultural Mechanization Engineers Ozodov Ezoz.

The main focus of this training was on how to create a startup and how to organize your work, the stages of creating a startup, and the grants that are currently being allocated for this area. The guest introduced to the organization of world brands.

Competent investors understand that projects that offer new services or products that are not yet on the market are the most profitable. In this regard, a startup should include a new concept of products or services that are in demand and profitable in the market.

After that, the students shared their ideas in detail and received tips on how to turn these ideas into a startup. At the end of the event, the guest was thanked for the training and presented with a memorable gift.
