

Collaboration with US universities is expanding

Last year, the project agreed to collaborate with Mississippi State University on the organization of summer internships with the University of Oklahoma to work on joint master's programs in Precision Agriculture and Agricultural Business (Agricultural Business). These initiatives are currently supported by the US Department of State, and the UniCEN program provides small grants for these activities (see <https://unicen.americancouncils.org/unicen-selection-results/>). Online meetings were organized online with Mississippi State University on January 7, and February 1 with Oklahoma State University to discuss collaboration under these grants.

On February 10-11, the Head of International Projects at Mississippi State University, Brian Farrell, visited our institute and got acquainted with the Institute and the Faculty of Finance. During the visit, the joint master's programs were discussed, meetings with faculty and graduate students were held, and Brian Farrel made a presentation on conditions and further development of cooperation at Mississippi State University. Following the presentation, answers were given to many questions of faculty members and graduate students.
