

A student from Fergana stays at home and earns money

Sardorbek Abbosov, a second-year student at the Tashkent Institute of Irrigation and Agricultural Mechanization Engineers, not only stays at home during the quarantine period, but also taking online classes, and she works in the backyard of her home. He also started earning money by helping family members.

The village of Vodil in the Fergana district, where he lives, is famous for its temperate climate, beautiful nature and flowing streams. Our people who want to go to Shohimardon pass through this village. Especially the description of raspberries grown here is indescribable. It is no exaggeration to say that this inconspicuous medicinal fruit is a miracle of the family business. Growing this fruit in this village is already popular. Vadil raspberries are popular today not only in the province but throughout the valley, where most of the inhabitants are engaged in raspberry cultivation.

Today, Sardorbek pays special attention to the care of raspberries in his home on the basis of new technologies, increasing their productivity. According to the student, each family harvests this fruit twice a year, earning 8-10 million soums. Some entrepreneurs make even more. - We were limited to growing only agricultural products for the needs of our family, - says S. Abbosov. - Now we have established a greenhouse. We take care of seed seedlings, as well as products such as tomatoes, cucumbers. We grow potatoes and carrots in the open field. We have all kinds of fruit seedlings in our yard. Yes, our zealous youngsters like this aim to contribute to food security during the quarantine period. After all, they are proving in practice that the garden is a great treasure.
