About the section

In order to train scientific and pedagogical personnel, a postgraduate course was opened at the department in 1936. Along with qualified specialists, many foreign scientists studied and defended their dissertations for academic degrees at the postgraduate school. By 1965, the number of graduate students had reached 50. Among them were many local postgraduates. Currently, the department operates as a part of the Vice-Rector for Research and Innovation of the Institute in order to train personnel by industry. Currently, the department has 2 full-time units (head and engineer of the 1st category) and 5 additional assistants.

Great importance is the organization of the department, mainly in the Institute of Scientific Research, Innovation and Training of Scientific and Pedagogical Personnel.
