It is clear that the effective and appropriate use of the three requirements of practice today requires knowledge, experience, and skills. It is also important to note that the number of educational institutions that are exemplary in the use of distance learning opportunities in the context of social distance, stay home, and distance work is also increasing.

The Zoom program, which is becoming more and more popular today, is very useful in achieving this educational goal through social networks. It has the ability to connect with up to 300 participants at a time, share information, answer questions on topics, and engage in discussions. The team of educators, who are not indifferent to the importance of the educational process, such as inculcating it in the minds of students, is also advanced in this regard.
